PREFACE

Dr. Judson Bennett Gilbert died on May 31, 1950, at the age of 51, of malignant hypertension, with many works accomplished but with many more projects in a partially completed state. Fortunately for us the bibliography herein published is one of his completed tasks.

Dr. Gilbert was born in Schenectady, New York, attended the local schools, Union College, and was graduated from Syracuse University College of Medicine in 1926. He interned at the Albany Hospital and became a resident at the Memorial Hospital in New York City. He specialized in urology, was elected a Diplomate of the American Board of Urology, and was intensely interested in cancer, especially of the urinary tract. His writings on testis tumors were extensive and are frequently referred to by subsequent writers on that subject.

Early in his professional career Dr. Gilbert acquired an interest in medical history. His first paper, written in collaboration with Dr. E. R. Wiese, and published in the Annals of Medical History in 1931, was a study of Theodor Kocher. Later he translated a paper by A.A.S. Verneuil written in 1859, describing the problems to be overcome in searching for the original references to surgery of amputations. In 1942, Dr. Gilbert published a "Facsimile Copy of the Questionnaire from the First Cancer Society, of 1802," printed in the Edinburgh Medical and Surgical Journal in 1806.

He enjoyed all types of music and his interpretation of Gershwin's compositions was outstanding. At the time of his death he was preparing a program of music composed by doctors for presentation at a meeting of the Charaka Club.

He acquired an extensive medical library, buying both at home and abroad. Nearly all the modern and older texts, theses and papers on urology found a place on his shelves. In addition he bought and studied books on medical history, medical biography and the works of medical truants. Many of his happiest hours were spent in his library, hard at work. But it seemed that he was even happier to have as a guest in his library anyone interested in the humanities and medicine. His supreme moment was that in which he could interest a young doctor in his hobby, the broad aspects of literature and medicine. The young man would probably leave the library with his arms loaded with many choice reprints and his head swimming with ideas and increased enthusiasm.

A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE HISTORY OF MEDICINE

Dr. Gilbert, in his interest in the interrelation between medicine and the arts, music and literature, compiled extensive bibliographies of famous people and their medical experiences, of medical truants who were musicians, poets, diarists or explorers. All of this material is as yet unpublished.

We are grateful to the New York Academy of Medicine Library Publication Fund Committee for making available this compilation of Dr. Gilbert's.

It is the busy man who has time to do these useful things.

A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF ARTICLES ON THE HISTORY OF AMERICAN MEDICINE, COMPILED FROM "WRITINGS ON AMERICAN HISTORY," 1902-1937.

Judson B. Gilbert

Most readers are familiar with the "Bibliography of the History of Medicine of the United States and Canada," published during recent years as an annual bibliography in the Bulletin of the History of Medicine. It will be remembered that the members of the American Association of the History of Medicine, forming the Committee for Research on the History of American Medicine, decided in April 1939 to carry out such an annual bibliography, and this was done under the able editorship of Genevieve Miller. The first series, covering the year of 1939, was published in 1940, and this work was carried on until the publication, in May-June 1948, of the ninth series, covering the year of 1947.

The value of this otherwise inaccessible material to medical librarians was considerable. Only those who have spent fruitless hours hunting elusive references can fully appreciate this. Many of these state publications, and material from other sources, were not only of high literary quality, but were gathered from local and state archives quite unknown to anyone working elsewhere.

On reviewing the early volumes of writings on American history and the Griffin series of the American Historical Association from 1902 to 1937, a total of forty-two volumes,* it was obvious that a wealth of material existed which had escaped any medical bibliography. Occasionally, Billings, Fletcher, and Garrison would list non-medical holdings at Washington in the Index Catalogue, and in the Index Medicus, but these were only occasional additions, and left this particular field of special source material practically untouched. Supplementary indexes to the current literature of medicine and its allied sciences has been carefully summarized by Janet Doe in the April 1934 issue of the Bulletin of the Medical Library Association. In the larger medical libraries, many of these sources are generally available.

Many of the references selected and presented here were originally printed with vague and indefinite titles. The reviewer, however, chose important topics which were given as footnotes. These medical notes have been included in our selections. The full contents of books have also yielded many important references to men such as Rush, Holmes, Marcus Whitman, José Rizal and others. Total pages were not given in the volume of historical writings for 1902. Inasmuch as it has been impossible to see these varied journals in the original, this should be taken into consideration when consulting references in that first year of publication. While the great majority of papers refer to American history, references also are included from Canada, Latin America, and the Philippines.

One of the rules laid down by Sir William Osler, in the introduction to his Bibliotheca (1929), was that cross-references, except in the index, should be reduced to a minimum. In a compilation of moderate size, this problem does not become too involved, although, here, wherever obvious mention should be made, the cross-reference is given.

The successive index volumes of the American Historical Association, referred to above, were examined under all fields of medicine and its related subjects, including that of medical biography. Considerable care was given to eliminate all references which had appeared in the succeeding alphabets of the four series of the Index Catalogue, in the Index Medicus, and in the Quarterly Cumulative Index Medicus. Books not listed in the Index Catalogue, including the Fourth Series to Volume 10 (1948), have been included here irrespective of the fact that, as books, they may have been cited in compilations other than those two main sources of medical references. In the present compilation, books and pamphlets are listed ahead of periodical references, following the scheme of presentation as used in the Index Catalogue.

Poole's Index to Periodical Literature, 1802-1907, published in six volumes, and the continuation as the Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature, is another source rich in medical material which overlaps to a moderate degree with this compilation. That series, however, is a separate source, and may be done at a later date, eliminating all material included here.

Acknowledgments

The opportunity to work at leisure over these indexes was due to the availability of these volumes through the generosity of Mr. James Howgate. It is a pleasure to acknowledge the help and advice received from Genevieve Miller, of Ithaca, New York, and from Heath Babcock and Maude Nesbit of the State Medical Library at Albany, New York. The assistance of Gordon E. Mestler, of the Department of Anatomy in the Long Island College of Medicine, has been of invaluable help.
